CHRIS FROST

nature morte

“All art is but imitation of nature.”

In this current exhibit, Chris Frost's depiction of the natural is seen through the lens of the manmade. Frost's sculpture and paintings explore forms of the living world, from the molecular to the environmental, through the materials and processes of industry and the manufactured.

From towering concrete flowers and scorched metal fungi to delicate aluminum branches, these works are a hybrid of the natural and the unnatural.

Chris Frost is an artist living and working in Somerville, MA.
